

A collection of various glass vessels, including tumblers, bowls, and decanters, arranged on a light-colored wooden surface. Some vessels are clear, while others are a translucent green. The vessels are mostly empty, with some containing a small amount of liquid. The background shows more glassware and the natural grain of the wood.

Reflections

- I think I could've been a bit better with my colour application, I hoped to try a few more things with my colour but just ran out of time. I hope to experiment a bit more in the future. I do want to make a set of bowls and glasses that have similar colour aspects in the future however
- My colour application didn't quite come through to fruition and I could've been a bit more adventurous with my colour application, but I think the colour added to my work and helped bring forward a new aspect.
